

HYPOCRITE NATION: Some Questions for Uncle Sam

Sam: (impatiently) Is this dude preaching again?

Ted: (chuckling in disdain) I think this author missed his vocation.
He should have been a preacher instead of a poet.

Tim: (naively) Why not preach through poetry?

Kris: You got it wrong: spoken sermons are simply empty air. Action alone counts. In that respect, this joker was jest another stupid meaningless fart.

Tim: Geez.
