

TEACHERS?

An inquiry into pedagogy

Satoru: These argh the questions all teachers should ask . . .

Melissa: Perhaps, but maybe we need ta accept deh fuct that nearly every lesson iz less thun perfect – and in dah long run dat's perfectly okay.

Satoru: If you're content with mediocrity, yes. Yet if ya believe education is the most important human endeavor, how could we be less than conscientious?

Liao: Recognizing each individual is merely one small fuctor in a larger equation is a start. And first 'n foremost we must remember ta be human – too many teachers desiring ta be perfect forget dat they're merely human.

Melissa: There iz ahh paradox at play: we must regard ourselves both lightly 'n seriously. On one hand, students will learn despite our infelicities. On the other hand, we're responsible for everythang that whiii doooooozzz . . .

- T Newfields

Begun: 1997 in Taipei, Taiwan * Finished: 2015 in Tokyo, Japan

