

How Weird: Out of the Box of Expectations

A GRAMMAR OF IDENTITY:

Some thoughts about multiple selves

About eight hours a day
I'm a worker-robot,
and six hours a day a breathing corpse.

About two hours a day
I'm an amazing dreamer,
and for the same time an avid gobbler of texts.

About an hour a day
I'm a language learner, and the same time a beast consuming food.

About forty minutes a day
I'm a compassionate listener, and an utter fool at least the same amount of time.

A few minutes each day
I'm a magical creature, wiggling each toe with joy.

With so many different "selves"
appearing & disappearing what fiction would you choose to invent when asked, "who are you?"

- T Newfields

Begun: 2009 in Tokyo, Japan ☆ Finished: 2018 in Yokohama, Japan

