

THE PAIN OF DISCOVERY:

Thoughts on cyber-intimacy and digital romance

Nadya: Any discovery here?

Not knowing she had a million type 1 BRU viruses or that she would resist all but the strongest oxides
I entered her laboratory
With a 30 mm cathode tube dilated to optimal aperture as she opened her eyes.

Her multi-phasic converter was irretractable but after a series of swift calculations dynamic coupling ensued.

Gasping in an orgasm of pure sensation and lacking all technological disdain
I injected a 250 ml solution of brainwash fluid into her polynomial axis, then wiped the semantic fluids off her processing chips as her galvanic skin responses rose again.

Finding her voltage unstable
I decided to terminate this experiment and for a few nanoseconds she had full access to my wiring and in that moment
both of us discovered
we were aliens.

Bill: Not in my eyes.

Rayo: Huh? I am discovering new things each moment of each