

Carla: Many of the desert's natural pyro-technics go unnoticed.

Carlos: Yeah, it's all a question of speed: most people move so fast that they fail to notice the slowly-exploding fireworks all about them.

Reed: Doesn't it go in the other direction, too? Human timespans are so 'slow' that many amazing things are over in less than an eye blink.

Yahui: (with a slight nod) You have a point . . .

- T Newfields

Beg.: 2000 in Nagoya * Fin.: 2021 in Yokohama

