DREAM CIRCLES:

A philosophical jaunt

Do spiders dream of butterflies & butterflies yearn for flowers?

Do soft winds dream of fierce cyclones, shaking skies & upturning stones?

Do stellar spirals dream of massive black holes, with a power we'll eventually behold?

Are we connected to each other through a web of dreams?

& is reality what it outwardly seems?

We may never answer such questions but ah — how we can dream!

Nadia: Poems like this are stupid. Meaningful questions should be answered by hard science, not idiotic poetry.

Wan-Sze: (Surprised) Wow! What sort of medication are you on today?

Nadia: Nothing – I'm simply getting tired ah empty philosophy.

Kasim: I concede that the word "dream" is overused.

Will: No, so-called reality is undervalued. (sighing, then quietly to himself) Why is it so many people doubt their own dreams?
